This is a keyboard macro that allows you to switch your IP address from a static value to a dynamic value. You may wish to try this if you are experiencing connection issues or network problems and you want to switch your IP address. This macro is designed to be used in conjunction with a program such as DHCP or Static IP. You can use this macro to modify the adapter setting. You must use the preferences to set up the IP settings you want to use including the name of the adapter (in the global settings). There is no error checking on the input fields, so be careful. Once the IP is set, the Widget can be closed until it's needed again. Prefer to use this macro instead of a software switch because you'll have a simpler workflow that will work with the other programs you use with your IP settings. Please be patient waiting for Windows to finish setting your IP. Clicking lots of buttons can really queue up a lot of commands. ⓘ Yahoo Widget Engine VERSION Description: 1.3 - Added additional hardcoded global IP addresses. 1.2 - Changed code to run without Yahoo Widget Engine or Widget Update. 1.1 - Addition of "Initializing" animation to the widget. 1.0 - Initial release Bots are programs that run automated tasks.
