When the 2015 legislative session of the Alabama House of Representatives began on January 14, Alabama House Speaker Pro Tempore Greg Reed issued an official invitation to some leaders of the public sector to join him on the House floor. I'll save my comments about that invitation for later. Instead, I want to focus on the fact that the group of invited guests were – and are – highly unusual. Not a single person in the group is either a conservative or a member of Alabama's most powerful business group. And they include not a single member of the Republican Party. In fact, the only one with even the slightest connection to the Republican Party is Congressman Bradley Byrne of Mobile. Even then, Byrne is a fairly moderate conservative. But there is another bit of truly unusual that should be noted – no Republicans were involved in drafting any of the bills that the group of lawmakers argued needed to pass the House before the session was brought to a close. The group was actually composed entirely of Democrats, led by former Alabama House Majority Leader Will Ainsworth. I'm not saying anything about the validity or in some cases the propriety of the bills the group passed. I'm

* The user needs to specify which table or other field he wants to work with. * The user can select a column or a field from the worksheet and copy the data. * The data that will be copied is the user's selection, so all fields will be updated, even the ones without names. * The database field is selected by the user and then it is renamed and has some optional settings. * The user can also define a schema and rename the database table. * The database table is created based on the user settings and some import settings are defined. * The data will be copied to the created table and a schema will be created for the table. * The data can be copied to another table if needed. * The data can be checked and the user can select the fields to keep. * The options can be edited. * Once everything is set, the user can run the macro and the whole process will be done. NOTE: * There is no copy table. * If a schema is defined, it will be used for the new table. * If a schema is not defined, then a new schema will be created. * There are no schemas, therefore, the created table will have the default schema. * Once the macro runs, there will be no user interaction, everything is automated. To evaluate the potentials of 3D transesophageal echocardiography (TEE) in pediatric cardiac surgery. Twenty-two patients (14 males, 8 females; aged between 6 months and 16 years; mean age 6.5 +/- 3.5 years) undergoing cardiac surgery were included. All patients were examined with both 2D and 3D TEE, before and after surgery. We analyzed the diagnostic value of 3D TEE with respect to 2D TEE and TEE alone in the detection of the following intraoperative abnormal conditions: mechanical ventilation, pulmonary artery hypertension (PAH), mechanical valve dysfunction, and postoperative complications. The first evaluation was carried out before surgery, and the second one 3 days after surgery. TEE was technically successful in all patients. Postoperative complications were observed in 15 of 22 patients. The most common was low cardiac output in 10 patients, and the second was PAH in 5 patients. Both mechanical valves and dysfunction were examined in 4 patients and correctly detected in all 4 patients. Three-dimensional TEE improved the detection of the following conditions: ventilation in 7 of 8 patients; PAH in 6 of 6 patients; and mechanical valves in 4 of 4 patients. The evaluation of postoperative complications was significantly improved by 3D TEE, compared with TEE and 2D T
