Hello, I use Norton Internet Security on a Windows 8.1 system running as guest (with antivirus) on a Windows 10 host, and I noticed that not only did it help prevent the system from getting a virus, it helped the Norton Update function restart/refresh in the background, which would normally happen with every reboot. Since this is the "host" system I use it on, I'd prefer if it didn't happen all the time, it'd be nice if the Update function could be slowed down a bit, say to once every hour or so. Since it's a guest system, I don't know how it would work as a host system (though I would expect to see a popup saying something like, "This program can't use the internet right now. It's being updated, please wait"). Do you know of a way to do this?

Thanks! A: You can turn off the "update" security prompts in Windows 10. In Windows 10, search for the feature Turn off Windows Security Notifications or Turn on Wi-Fi Then press the "x" to turn the feature off. If you must continue to have these security prompts, then you can turn it back on with Turn off Windows Security Notifications or Turn on Wi-

Fi And then search for "Turn off Windows Security Notifications or", and "Turn on Wi-Fi".

It's one thing to have a law against stupid behavior, but it's another thing entirely to have a law against being stupid. How to Get Away With Murder establishes what's become a litmus test for any kind of social justice — even those who would never think of themselves as such. To make the case that this is about social justice, Tom Skerritt explains this more, The primary focus here is fairness. The tragic thing about laws prohibiting vile behaviors is that often someone who doesn't share the law's homophobic or racist or sexist opinions will be affected by the law nonetheless. People who do not share the views of a segment of a population or a political party or an ethnic group can be disproportionately affected by
