The report said that there has been an 85 percent increase in the number of tablets children from 2 to 4 years old have access to. The report said that the biggest growth happened in the last quarter of 2012 and is the first increase in tablet ownership since 2011. They also found that most children older than 4 have a laptop or PC. "This is really interesting because tablets are really emerging as the new, leading educational device for the 2-4 year age range." said the report's author, Google's Executive Director of Education, Shereef Elnahal. Kids between the ages of 5 and 9 were surveyed as well, and they had laptops and PCs — but not tablets. "Our study shows that tablet ownership by 4 year olds is growing faster than the tablet ownership by 5-9 year olds," said Matt Cooke, the project's manager. "This is really interesting because tablets are really emerging as the new, leading educational device for the 2-4 year age range." While tablets are taking over preschoolers, it's still the classic computer in terms of usage by older kids. RELATED: 9 Kids-Only Video Games for the iPad The kids surveyed who had PCs and laptops were asked about what they preferred to do on it. They said they most use their computers for "playing, searching, doing homework, and
